Besides the joyful aspects of marriage, expressed in a series of wedding dances, there are moments of sadness when the bride remembers her family, which she has now left for ever. This song, sung at royal weddings, expresses the depth of the bride's love for her father, and her sorrow at the parting.

"They have stabbed my father like a wildebeest!
It has thundered in a cloudless sky!"

The mode of the song is hemitonic penta, as represented in Diagram b).
